Some Distant Memory is an action-packed, futuristic alternate reality game about a group of friends that mysteriously find themselves trapped in a dimension where their friends have suddenly vanished. It is their first night in this weird new world. They don't know if it's the real world or some mad dream, but in this place, there is only darkness and they are alone. Some Distant Memory is a spiritual successor of the original 2003 game All Kinds of Awesome, with a new 3D environment and more "awesome", as usual. You are out on a space station, literally out in space, orbiting around a distant gas giant. The mission is simple: communicate to Earth and NASA. You are the only hope for rescue and all your friends have vanished. You have a communication device that has been tuned into an old frequency. But there is a very real problem: the massive gravity that is surrounding the planet will suck the space craft down into the planet, possibly beyond the surface, possibly as close as the sun....

Overview - In the largest RPG game ever made, choose your Hero from eight strong Champions and help them battle the creatures of Wasteland.

Throughout history, the Burning Legion waged war with the other seven gods of creation and destroyed their civilizations. Their victory was complete, but the Legion was not destroyed, and its Queen, the Scar-Queen, had taken humanoid form and cast a shadow over the lands of Azeroth. To protect its realm, the Alliance recruits seven of the greatest Heroes and Champions to fight alongside them. Skirmishes and battles are fought to uncover the dark truth of the Legion's plot, and the fate of the Burning Legion itself is determined by the strength and the cunning of humanity alone.

In the open world of Azeroth, players identify themselves as heroes chosen by the Alliance to defeat evil and protect the world. Players select a Hero to help them progress across the massive world of Azeroth, fighting vicious foes that range from fearsome wild beasts to deadly npc's, while accumulating powerful loot and abilities that bestow powerful talents on the player. Players step into the role of a Hero to improve individual skills, social relationships, and the base health, mana, equipment and item levels of their party members.

Players fight continually for their story-arc to reach a satisfactory end, and a myriad of narrative options is available, from faction alliances to side quests and lore puzzling. Players can freely explore Azeroth using a powerful party

The most real-life licensed cars you've ever seen with the most realistic physics you've ever played with, Trainz Platinum Edition gives you the chance to design, create and drive any mainline locomotive in North America and real-life scenery. Create your own trains on an infinite number of routes, share them with friends or purchase and customise engines to your personal requirements and specs. With a friendly but powerful, step-by-step user interface, a user-definable route editor and a full suite of tools and measurement tools, Trainz Platinum Edition is the world's most realistic train simulation. For the real-life trains lovers

out there, there are over 6,000 photographs of every mainline locomotive from North America, as well as the full range of interiors and fixtures from the real world, and over 800,000 objects to interact with. It's a real train simulator that puts you back into the seat, the seat for the real people and freight cars you've always wanted to drive. Real trackside scenery and events can be planned and created using the function-rich route editor. Additional "special cars" are available in game and are expensive like the classic ones. They are all useful, and you can choose to buy them or not buy them. 2. Top-down view of trains in environment. In the track side trains are like in many games, and you can click on them and see the interior. 3. Pixel-shaded track side view. In this way you can see the trackline, under bridges, switching points and signals. Also you see some details of a train. You can change the style in game. 4. Top-down view of interiors. You can see inside of trains, and you can click on them to look at the interiors. You can also climb inside of trains, view the tracksides and look for switches. 5. You can see the trackside of a train too. You can climb on roofs, tanks and other parts of the train, see the trackline and program switches to allow the train to go in only one direction. 6. You can increase the amount of friendly trains, and make them move on you. 7. You can control vehicles of other players in battle mode, and lose or win. 8. You can view in Trainz Platinum Edition map (it's 2 c9d1549cdd

Designers 1 to 4 Publisher 2 to 3 Developer 2 to 3 Release March 19th 2018 Languages Available English, German, Polish Crowdfunded, £11,860 / $14,909 pledged With the fairly new resurgence of crowdfunding in the world of Indie gaming it was inevitable that we would see more and more games that were crowdfunded. Thankfully, the odds of a game turning out bad are fairly low with a respectable level of planning and documentation happening before an Indie game comes out of the oven. As a result, the vast majority of crowdfunded games turn out to be excellent and hopefully the genre is continuing to grow. Eurogamer (in its 'Best of 2018' Awards) decided to pull together all their award winners, many of which were crowdfunded, and see how they compare to each other. The results were interesting and we decided to compare their '8 of the best'.1) Braid (Indie, crowdfunded, 2014)2) Braid (Indie, crowdfunded, 2014)3) Spec Ops: The Line (Indie, crowdfunded, 2012)4) Soma (Indie, crowdfunded, 2015)5) Valley (Indie, crowdfunded, 2015)6) Hyper Light Drifter (Indie, crowdfunded, 2016)7) Worlds Adrift (Indie, crowdfunded, 2016)8) David: The Game (Indie, crowdfunded, 2014)What are they saying about them?They start by setting out to demonstrate the merits of crowd funding as a distribution model. Unfortunately, that's all they have to do. They skip any discussion about the quality of crowd funded games in general, instead they waste time discussing the merits of their own choices as they come up with reasons why all their picks are great and any others are bad. Because how could that possibly be?Funnily enough, Eurogamer does make a case for the best, if not all the crowdfunded games.1) Braid is a true story (although not of ours) and is a shame that we had to wait so long before it saw release. To be honest, I feel that Braid could have benefitted from this sort of treatment earlier on. A huge reason as to why this is is that the way that the game is set out makes it feel extremely new and refreshing. I love the sense of freedom that the player has as you explore a game world that is procedurally generated for every player. The game doesn't just let the

This is my report on my first virtual visit to the city of Bransik. It's part of the 'One-on-One' (OonO) project, where two gaming friends meet in-game and then meet in person if both decide to participate. The host is Meier and I am Will (green-eyes). In this event the player is always listed as the host on this report. Meier is in the city itself when he receives my request to meet up. He invites me to visit him in person, but I decline. Will is traveling through the city on my behalf as an FSH (Friendship Scheme Hunter) and invites me to check out Bransik. When I arrive at Bransik's gate, Will offers to let me in but my character's face automatically appears on the screen. Will looks surprised when I just turn to him and say that he invited me to visit Bransik. Will: "...Welcome to Bransik, your first 'Founder's Gift' visitor! Nice to meet ya..." Meier is in Bransik and greets me by name. Meier: "Welcome to Bransik, F'ter Al'arck, your first OonO player..." Both Meier and I agree to meet in person if we both decide to participate. Meier: "If both of us decide to do this then I offer up my home as a place to meet. It's a large estate. The nearest gate is in the north of Bransik." I'm suddenly anxious to get to Bransik and not having a place to stay is getting a bit worrisome. I ask Meier about having a place to stay. "I can ask my house-servants to provide you with board. They normally do this." I look to the north and think out loud, "Northgate would be close." Meier: "Northgate is it. But it's best to walk to it." I'm concerned about walking in this large city. I ask Meier if he has maps, "to help me be safe." Meier: "I thought you might like something like this." He takes out something that appears to be a wall of stacked map

Wed, 30 Sep 2004 00:12:15 GMT>Q: How to search ListView for text? I'm trying to find a simple way to search ListView for a certain text. I was quite surprised that there is no such functionality in ListView. Here's an example of how I usually do it: One of my screens has a ListView, you can type in it's textView one or more letters/chars and it will give you all the items starting with the letter. I'm aware of TextView's search function, but I was wondering if there is any way to do this with a ListView? A: If you want to use current cursor position as a
