I've got a 2-way binding inside an Ajax load() call. Everything displays as expected except for the fact that {{Ctrl}} doesn't display any values. {{Ctrl}} is part of a directive that has access to the parent scope. My understanding is that the parent scope should populate the child scopes values and get propagated up the scope hierarchy, but I'm not seeing this happening. Here's a snippet of the code that doesn't work: $scope.load = function(id, complete) { var complete = complete || {}; $http({ url: '/app/get', method: 'POST', data: {id:id}, dataType: 'JSON', headers: {'Content-Type': 'application/json'}, onSuccess: function(data, status, headers, config) {
